2. Course outline

- Use the following table to organize the topics to be taught in the course. If you need to include topics that cover other requirements you have to teach (for example, national syllabus), make sure that you do so in an integrated way, but also differentiate them using italics. Add as many rows as you need.
- This document should not be a day-by-day accounting of each unit. It is an outline showing how you will distribute the topics and the time to ensure that students are prepared to comply with the requirements of the subject.
- This outline should show how you will develop the teaching of the subject. It should reflect the individual nature of the course in your classroom and should not just be a “copy and paste” from the subject guide.
- If you will teach both higher and standard level, make sure that this is clearly identified in your outline.

	Topic (make organizing principle of the course clear—areas of exploration, central concepts, inquiry questions or other) State the topics in the order you are planning to teach them	Contents	Allocated time	Assessment instruments to be used	Resources List the main resources to be used, including information technology if applicable.

3. IB Internal and external assessment requirements to be completed during the course

Briefly explain briefly how and when you will work on them. Include the date when you will first introduce the internal and external assessment requirements, when they will be due and how students will be prepared to complete them.

Students will be introduced to all the requirements at the beginning of the course (september of Year 1). They will get familiar with the structure of each assessment and the will get familiar with how they are assessed and when.

The course is divided into three topics. Both, internal and external, assessments will be practiced in all three topics. Nevertheless, each in each topic there will be a main focus on one of the assessments.

All practice of all the components of the assessments will be followed by a detaied feedback (written, or oral) provided by the teacher, or the students, or both.

Paper 1 – The main focus on Paper 1 will be in the first semester of the first year. Students will practice writing opinion essays on selected texts to improve their skills for this particular assessment and to prove that they have understood the purpose and focus of Paper 1. Paper 1 mock exam will take place in June of Year 1.

Paper 2 – The main focus on Paper 2 will be in Year 2. Students will practice writing comparison essays on selected extracts of the texts studied, but also on the additional resources discussed and used in the class. Paper 2 mock exam will take place in December of Year 2.

Individual oral – The main focus on Individual oral will be at the end of the first semester of Year 2 and the beginning of the second semester of Year 2. Students will practice their skills while giving oral presentations on given/chosen topics considering the texts studied, or the additional texts and materials used in the course. Individual oral mock exam will take place in January/February of Year 2.

Higher level essay – Students will be introduced to Higher level essay at the beginning of Year 1 in order to provide them with enough time to think about what topic they would lie to write about. A special focus will be provided on the fact that the topic they choose for the essay cannot be used again for the Individual oral.

Final Assessments in Year 2 :

Febuary - Individual oral

Febuary – deadline for Higher level essay

April/May – Paper 1, Paper 2

4. Links to TOK

You are expected to explore links between the topics of your subject and TOK. As an example of how you would do this, choose one topic from your course outline that would allow your students to make links with TOK. Describe how you would plan the lesson.

Topic	Link with TOK (including description of lesson plan)
How can different ideologies affect people ?	Students are going to read a chapter of Ku-klux-klan. Tady bydlí láska and they will explore the question of racism and how young generations are affected by older generations (father → son, for example). By doing that, we will have a class discussion which aim will be to think about the following questions : - Are these ideologies still in existence in some parts of the world ? If so, why ? - Is any of the ideologies discussed justifiable ? If so, how are they justified and why ? - How is cultural background related to how these ideologies affect them ? What about social status ? - How can people fight against these ideologies in order to be succesfull ? Why do people fight them ? To what outcome ? - Is it possible to change something ? If so, how ?

5. Approaches to learning

Every IB course should contribute to the development of students' approaches to learning skills. As an example of how you would do this, choose one topic from your outline that would allow your students to specifically develop one or more of these skill categories (thinking, communication, social, self-management or research).

Topic	Contribution to the development of students' approaches to learning skills (including one or more skill category)
-------	---

In what ways can war effect person's psyche ?	In this part of the course, students will read about war, and especially about in what ways it can affect people in different positions in the relation to war. Thinking skills – Students will practice thinking skills by thinking about the different ways of how war affect people and their psyche. They will also think about how people can deal with this kind of pressure in order not to lose oneself. Here are some examples of how this skill will be developed in the course : connecting studied texts with current affairs around the world and exploring similarities/differences ; doing role plays in which students make spontaneous decisions, comparing the effects of war on different people (a man in war, mother of a soldier, etc...) Social skills – Students will practice these skills by doing collaborative tasks and group works in class connected to the studied topic. The basic thing for students to understand will be to acknowledge that people are different not only through space, but through time as well in some aspects, but in others they are not that different. By comparing works set in different time periods, the students will explore the differences and similarities of the effects of war. Furthermore, these ways will be used in the course, for example : creating classroom and discussion norms in order to secure safe place for sharing opinions without the fear of others' reactions, to secure the chance for everyone to participate in the discussions, and to ensure that all students feel safe to participate. An environment in which students respect not only the texts and authors, but also other cultures, and each other. An exemplary activity is to look for flaws in social skills of the characters in the works studied. Communication skills – Students will practice these skills by doing oral presentations and formulating opinions in class about the topic studied and the texts/materials used. Communication is very important skill in close connection with social skills, therefore they are likely to overlap in some activities. And some ways which will be used to foster this skill are, for example : providing all students with a chance to respond to the studied texts, hence developing their articulating skills (and practicing thinking skills as well), having students do individual and group presentations (as mentioned above), introducing students to various tools they can use for more effective and engaging communication in their presentations, doing role plays, etc... An exemplary activity would be to find connections among the main characters in the studied works and present them to a class.

6. International mindedness

Every IB course should contribute to the development of international-mindedness in students. As an example of how you would do this, choose one topic from your outline that would allow your students to analyse it from different cultural perspectives. Briefly explain the reason for your choice and what resources you will use to achieve this goal.

Topic	Contribution to the development of international mindedness (including resources you will use)
What is the role of gender in society?	Students will get familiar with a range of texts and materials addressing this topic. By doing that, they will obtain knowledge about the development of the role of gender throughout space and time. In the works studied, students get familiar with the roles of women in different time periods and in different cultures. Students will then explore the various ways of the role of gender in different societies and how it is reflected in that society. Furthermore, students will compare the different gender roles from various times and places to their own culture and explore the differences, or similarities. To be more specific, students will read, for example, A Pale View of Hills by Kazuo Ishiguro. In this novel, the role of a woman is set in the Japanese culture. Here, Ishiguro, being of Japanese origin, but living most of his lives in the UK, highlights the role of a man and a woman in marriage in Japanese culture and what happens if someone attempts to bend the traditions. This gives the students a vivid example of a gender role in a different culture and provides them with the chance to compare it to the gender role they are familiar with.

7. Development of the IB learner profile

Through the course it is also expected that students will develop the attributes of the IB learner profile. As an example of how you would do this, choose one topic from your course outline and explain how the contents and related skills would pursue the development of any attribute(s) of the IB learner profile that you will identify.

Topic	Contribution to the development of the attribute(s) of the IB learner profile
-------	---

What is the role of gender in society?	The aim of the course is to develop and cherish all IB learner profile attributes, of course. But to provide a more specific example, only a few are presented here : Open-minded – As the course will proceed, the students will get more familiar with different topics concerning different cultures and time periods and how they differ in comparison to the culture of the language studied. For example, the students will learn to acknowledge and respect how different gender roles might in other cultures. Moreover, they will recognize that the gender role is something which is constantly developing and changing in the society and they will be able to support it with suitable examples (e.g. the Feminist movement and the change of the role of women in some countries around the world). They will also realize that even the current role of gender in society is not set in stone and might change in the future again. The possible change will suggested in the work A Handmaid's Tale. Thinkers – Students will critically think about and exercise solving comples problems which are intercultural and, therefore, may appear all around the globe. Hence, it is likely that students will encounter these problems in their life and they will be more prepared for these possible situations and possible ways to deal with them. While studying the role of gender in society, they will think about how the role of both sexes have changed/developed throughtout history. Additionally, they will think about potential future development of gender roles along with learning how the changes of gender roles refelct on society and shape it.

8. Resources

Are instructional materials and other resources (for example, equipment for recording if you teach languages A or room for the performance aspect if you teach literature and performance) available in sufficient quality, quantity and variety to give effective support to the aims and methods of the courses? Briefly describe what plans are in place if changes are needed.

Our school's classrooms are all equipped with computers, multimedia projectors, touch boards, speakers, and high-speed Wi-Fi. There is a computer lab and a well-equipped library with several multimedia and VR stations accessible to students. The school has purchased teacher resource materials for every subject including textbooks, subject guides and teaching methodology material. There is also a virtual link to the library of Western Bohemia University in Pilsen which enables students and teachers to use a wide variety of resources, magazine articles, fiction and non-fiction literature, etc.

There are also printing and scanning stations available to students and teachers enabling them to work with and create various teaching and learning materials. Overall, the amount and quality of available resources is sufficient to give effective support to the Czech A: Literature course.

Additional materials and sources to be used in class :

Martin Luther King – essays, speech 'I have a dream', quotes

Gandhi – quotes

Adrienn Rich – selection of poems

Audre Lorde – selection of poems

Anne Bradstreet – selection of poems
